

100 things to do in the Guttland Region

There is a lot to do and to discover in the Guttland Region, but please: take it slow! This region is something for connoisseurs, for guests in search of enchanting natural landscapes, lavishly decorated and restored old farmhouses, imposing castles and mysterious castles. Hundreds of kilometres of cycling and hiking trails are waiting to be discovered. In many places you will be warmly welcomed by the Guttlanders and invited to get to know at first hand their country, life & traditions.

Note: To be on the safe side, please check online before you arrive, whether there have been any changes to opening times or other arrangements.

Castles & Fortresses

The Guttländ is the region of castles and fortresses. Nowhere else in Luxembourg is there such a high concentration of medieval buildings as here. Besides individual fortresses, such as the one in Useldange or Pettingen, the Valley of the Seven Castles is one of the country's main tourist attractions. The valley boasts the Mersch, Schoenfels, Ansembourg and Koerich castles as well as the Hollenfels fortress and the private Ansembourg and Septfontaines fortresses. The old structures of the Guttländ region have survived down to the present day and are regularly filled with life during festivals and markets.

THE VALLEY OF THE SEVEN CASTLES

ANSEMBOURG

Ansembourg Castle

The Grand-Château d'Ansembourg was built from 1639 onwards by Thomas Bidard, a pioneer in the iron and steel industry. In the 18th century, the castle underwent a significant change when Thomas Bidard's heirs received a knighthood to the rank of barons in 1728, and then to the rank of Earls of the Holy Roman Empire. The gardens were laid out from 1730 onwards, with statues, staircases and decorative fountains in the style of the gardens of the period (see page 72). Some areas can be rented.

HOLLENFELS

Hollenfels Castle

On a rocky outcrop at a height of 315 meters, Hollenfels Castle looks over the Eisch Valley. Hollenfels belongs to the Valley of the Seven Castles and captivates with its 40 metre high keep. A stone bridge spans the moat. Today, the site hosts a youth hostel and an SNJ youth centre dedicated to environmental education. The „Melting Pot“ restaurant is located in the youth hostel. The castle is currently being restored.

KOERICH

Koerich Castle

One of the most typical lowland castles of Luxembourg is nestled in the small valley of the Goeblange stream. With its mighty fortified tower, also known as the witches' tower, and its outer walls in late Romanesque style, the castle forms a remarkable unit together with the Baroque church and the old houses of the village. Wirich I, Lord of Koerich and steward of Luxembourg, had the castle built at the end of the 12th century. In the 14th century, Gilles d'Autel-Koerich added a Gothic residential building and two towers on the south façade. The first conservation works on the castle began in 1995, and were completed in the autumn of 2019. The ruin can be visited through a barrier-free access.

MERSCH

Mersch Castle

In the year 1232 Theodorich I burst on to the scene. The first Lord of Mersch was a knight and vassal, thus head of the court administration of Countess Ermesinde. He built a castle in what today is the centre of Mersch. The castle was repeatedly attacked over the centuries, for example by Burgundian troops, who set it on fire. Towards the end of the 16th century, Paulus von der Veltz had the medieval castle rebuilt into a comfortable manorial abode. The former castle chapel houses a small castle museum (see page 33). Today the castle is the seat of the municipal administration.

SCHOENFELS

Schoenfels Castle

Frederic of Schoenfels aka „Ferri“ built a fortified court in Schoenfels in 1292. An imposing 21-metre high fortified and residential tower was erected. The keep was rebuilt more often over the centuries. In the 19th century the castle was given a neo-Gothic makeover, the windows were enlarged and roof structures were added. Currently, the English gardens from 1820 and the tower are being restored.

OTHER CASTLES/FORTRESSES

PETTINGEN

Pettingen Castle

The remaining walls give the impression that a mighty castle must have stood here once. Pettingen Castle has its origins in a fortress built in the 10th century. The moat, which once protected the inhabitants from intruders, is 15 meters wide. The names of the Lords of Pettingen are linked to all important events in Luxembourg in the Middle Ages - for example the wedding of Ermesinde, the accession of Henry IV to the throne, the marriage contract of Count John the Blind. The castle in Pettingen is one of the best preserved moated castles in the country.

USELDANGE

Useldange Castle

The estate of Useldange came into being by division of inheritance ca. 1100. The first owners of Useldange Fortress were probably Theobald of Useldange and his wife Azeka. The castle and chapel suffered severe damage in the 15th century. Later the fortress decayed visibly. In 1924 Francis Kuhn-Wolff acquired the fortress ruins. Instead of the gate she had a villa built, which today serves as the town hall. A cultural path for the visually impaired was laid out around the fortress, under the patronage of UNESCO to present the local cultural heritage in its historical form. This path is designed to enable the visually impaired to feel, hear and smell history.

Museums

The history of Luxembourg is showcased in the museums of Guttland. How did a saw-mill work in the past? How did it feel to have to work in the 200-year-old slate mine? How was schnapps distilled 100 years ago? In the house of the last potter of Nospelt, visitors can get an insight into the secrets of time-honoured craftsmanship. Original finds from the Stone Age to the Roman Age can be admired in the former vicarage in Nospelt. Police and fire department uniforms from all over the world are on display in Capellen and Senningen.

BECKERICH

Mill of Beckerich

The idyllic mill in Beckerich has been renovated to preserve the local cultural heritage. The building next door is the former sawmill. It houses numerous agricultural machines, which volunteers have restored and brought to life with love and skill. Visitors can also book a one-hour demonstration of old sawing techniques. The old craft lives and revives the mill in Beckerich. A specially made water wheel has recently been turning at full speed again. Immerse yourself in a world of the past with insights into the old craft of the master millers or carpenters. This project is run by the wise „Millepätteren“ (Mill godfathers), who share their valuable knowledge with you with enthusiasm.

KEHLEN

Distillery Museum

In 2007 Susi and Robert Adam opened a distillery museum on their farm in Kehlen to mark the distillery's centennial, featuring in particular a steam engine, a phonograph and an old stove. „We want to put ourselves in the life 100 years ago“, says Robert Adam. Together with his wife, he has collected a lot of things from flea markets. The still, which his grandfather Jean Adam bought in 1907, is there, of course. Once the visitors have got a glimpse into the techniques and traditions of distillation, they can try the company's own schnapps and liqueurs.

REIMBERG

Michel Lucius Museum

The famous Luxembourg geologist Dr Michel Lucius was born in Reimberg in 1876 into a working class family. Through his father's profession, who worked in the Mertziger quarry, Lucius came into contact with geology at an early age. The house where Lucius was born now houses a small museum where visitors can learn more about his life and research on two floors. Among his other attainments, Lucius was chief geologist of the Turkish Ministry of Economic Affairs. In addition, the work of a geologist is presented and explanations are provided on how to decipher a geological map and which stones can be found in and around the museum.

Historical Sites

The Guttland region is home to many prehistoric and ancient sites as well as Gallo-Roman sites, such as the Roman villa in Mersch, the thermal baths in Mamer or the villa in Goebange. The Villa Rustica in Goebange „Miecher“ is a larger Gallo-Roman estate in the Treverian region. If you are fascinated by the Stone Age, you can take a look at the Neolithic village in Blaschette or at the impressive menhir in Mersch.

GOEBBLANGE

Roman Villa

The Villa Rustica was a larger Gallo-Roman estate on the territory of the Celtic tribe of Treveri. It was built in the early 1st century and covers a walled area of seven hectares, on which at least 13 stone buildings stood. In addition to the luxurious manor house, two other residential buildings, a small temple and three outbuildings completed the picture. Even if only the foundations are preserved today, it is easy to imagine how magnificent the complex must have been. The knowledge gained proves that people from the Stone, Bronze and Iron Ages had already left their mark on this place.

HELMSANGE / STAFELTER

Raschpëtzer

The „Raschpëtzer“-Qanat in Helmsange Forest is an underground aqueduct system for supplying drinking water to the former Roman settlement area in today's municipalities of Walferdange and Steinsel. The system was built around 130 AD. The technology of the Qanat (the underground water supply through the construction of tunnels and shafts) actually originates from the desert areas of Iran. With a length of 700 meters and a maximum depth of 36 meters, the plant still has a capacity of 180 cubic meters of drinking water per day despite its very old age. The building is an important relic of Roman engineering.

Religious Heritage

Numerous chapels and churches in the Guttland attest to the religious heritage through the long Christian tradition of Luxembourg. Many chapels have their own history - for example the Willibrord Church with its colourful frescoes or Fautelfiel Chapel, which was built into a sandstone grotto. The late classicistic style of the parish church in Mersch is rare, while the Saint Rémy church in Koerich is considered one of the most magnificent baroque churches in the country.

The chapel is a special gem, thanks to the secluded location, peaceful atmosphere and the architecture and history. It was listed as a national monument in 2019.

Helperknapp was already a place of pilgrimage in the Middle Ages. The „Helpermaart“, still one of the largest markets in the region today, was held there every year.

KAPWEILER

St. Anne's Chapel

The St. Anne's Chapel (1505), one of the oldest in the country, offers a breathtaking view from its hilly location. Not only does it have great historical value, but its artistic quality also makes it an important testimony to the heritage handed down by the Benedictines. The altar originally came from Neumünster Abbey, clues to which can be found in the existing Forting family coat of arms. Benoît Fortin was abbot there from 1717 to 1743 and probably commissioned the altar. The central oil painting, signed by Pierre Maisonet (1750-1827), is a copy of a painting by the Venetian Giovanni Battista Pittoni.

KOERICH

St. Rémy Church

Angels with golden wings crouch on the columns above the altar and blow trumpets. The church in Koerich is considered one of the most magnificent baroque churches in the country. The confessionals are carved in wood. In addition, there is the impressive altar and the paintings by the artist Emmerich Millim. In 1748 the church was built on the foundations of a small medieval church from 1200 - with the help of the personal fortune of Father Jean-Pierre Ningels. Perched on a hill above the village, the church underwent extensive restoration between 1991 and 1993.

MARIENTHAL

Marienthal Monastery

Founded in the 13th century, Marienthal was originally a poor monastery. This changed in 1258 with the arrival of Yolanda of Vianden. Marienthal experienced an upswing through various donations to Luxembourg by the Counts of Vianden. Yolanda had a library established and promoted the economic and cultural life of the monastery. During the Thirty Years' War, the monastery was gradually abandoned and finally dissolved in 1783. The building provided accommodation for many refugees during World War II. Today the Service National de la Jeunesse (SNJ) runs a youth education centre there.

MERSCH

Parish Church

The church at Michelsplatz in Mersch was demolished when it became dilapidated. The only remnant of the former parish church is the Saint Michael's Tower on the market square. The three-nave deanery church was built in late classicist style from 1844 to 1850. This architectural trend is rather rare in Luxembourg for ecclesiastical buildings. It can be recognized by the Doric columns in front of the entrance, which are strongly reminiscent of ancient, mainly Greek models. The interior of the church was painted in 1936 by Father Notker Becker from the Maria Laach Abbey.

RECKANGE

Eenelter Chapel

A chapel has stood on this site in Reckange since early Christian times. The chapel was first mentioned in a document in 1180. The right to hold markets was already in force at the time, making this one of the oldest markets in Luxembourg. In 1751 a new chapel was consecrated. It fell into disrepair during the French Revolution. The furnishings were sold. The present chapel was built in 1897 in honour of St. Donatus and Theobald on a hill not far from the menhir, which overlooks Mersch.

RINDSCHLEIDEN

St. Willibrord Church

The Willibrord Church in Rindschleiden is one of the oldest and most beautiful churches in the country. It is known for its colourful 15th and 16th century frescoes on an area of 170 m² which depict scenes from the Old and New Testament. The main altar with its carving and important religious figures is also remarkable. Originally, the church was built in the 10th century in honour of all the saints. In the 16th century it was then consecrated to St. Willibrord. From its initial size of 50 m², it has been extended several times over the centuries, as can be clearly gauged today through the different architectural styles.

SAEUL

Romanesque Church

The Romanesque church in Saeul is thought to have been built in the 12th century. It was first mentioned in a document in 1318. In the 1960s, the church was completely restored in the style of that time. The church was built to a very simple design and the building materials were clearly emphasized. Remains of fresco paintings can be seen in the apse.

WALFERDANGE

Trinity Church

The church of Walferdange was built from 1845 to 1852 in the neoclassical style church and dedicated to the Holy Trinity. St. George is the secondary patron saint. It was consecrated in 1867 by the apostolic vicar Nikolaus Adames. Two niches in the neoclassical front are decorated with contemporary statues of Saint Maximilian Kolbe and Saint Theresa of Lisieux. Remarkable features in the interior include the side altars and the statues of St. Ignatius of Loyola and St. Francis Xavier, which come from the Cathedral of Luxembourg, but above all the magnificent wall paintings by Gerhard Lamers from 1903. They were restored with great care in 2011.

Cultural Centres

The cultural centres in the Guttland region, including Mamer, Mersch and Niederanven, are intended as places for encounters, cultural exchange and platforms for artists from home and abroad. The Millegalerie, for example, endeavours to raise awareness about sustainable development among visitors through cultural offerings. The Luxembourg Literature Archive researches, documents and conserves works of Luxembourg literature. And with its qualitatively colourful program, the Niederanven Cultural Centre addresses an audience beyond the borders of the region.

BECKERICH

D'Millen

A variety of cultural activities are organized in the former sawmill, with efforts to raise awareness about sustainable development. In addition to discovery tours around the environment and nature, the mill hosts workshops and seminars on the life and crafts of the past and rents out facilities for corporate and private events. Visitors can also book demonstrations showing how logs were cut in the sawmill at that time. The offer is supplemented by art exhibitions.

Parks, Gardens & Special natural sites

The Guttland region has it all: from fine castle parks with statues from Greek and Roman mythology or remote nature reserves that offer a protected habitat for rare species.

In Colpach Park there is a centaur statue, a mythical creature half man and half horse. A wooden walkway leads through the Marais de Grendel nature reserve onto a wetland. The Aarnescht nature reserve is known for its high number of different species of orchids.

ANSEMBOURG

Ansembourg Park

The Grand Château d'Ansembourg was built from 1639 onwards (see page 9). The baroque gardens were laid out from 1730 onwards. In addition to numerous plant species, fruit trees and decorative fountains, the terraced green areas also feature sculptures, for example in the so-called „mythological alley“, which brings together ten statues from Greek and Roman mythologies. The gardens are open to the public except on certain days (see website).

Syrdall Schwemm

The water world in the swimming pool in Syrdall is characterized by modern architecture and a futuristic design. The large glass facade offers a fabulous panorama, and there are many sitting and lying possibilities. In summer, there is also a spacious outdoor sunbathing area and playground. The wellness facility features two Finnish saunas, a bio sauna, a steam bath, sensory experience showers and a wonderful sauna terrace for plenty of relaxation. The swimming pool bistro is the icing on the cake.

CONTERN

Jumpbox

The Jumpbox in Contern is Luxembourg's first indoor trampoline park. It features an 800 m² trampoline facility with different areas. For example, you can play volleyball or basketball on a trampoline surface or simply jump across the hall. Instructors initiate visitors and show warm-up exercises. There are also offers for groups, for example for birthdays or team-building measures. In the Jumpbox it is not a matter of making perfect jumps or acrobatic tricks, but of having fun first and foremost.
